What is the Faith And The City Mentor A Family Program?

The Faith And The City Mentor A Family Program – endorsed by the Regional Commission on Homelessness – works closely with the metro area’s faith and civic communities. Through these partnerships, we “mentor” working homeless families – helping them get off the streets, out of shelters, and into stable housing. We facilitate their efforts to achieve enduring independence and self-sufficiency.

Established five years ago as the Shelter A Family Program, Mentor A Family has worked in partnership with scores of congregations and other organizations spanning the Christian, Jewish, and Muslim communities. These partnerships have helped hundreds of people – half of them children – to escape homelessness and secure permanent housing.

Mentor A Family is one of several initiatives operated by Faith And The City, a private, non-profit organization founded in 1999 by Ambassadors James T. Laney and Andrew Young with the goal of encouraging a sense of shared responsibility and common destiny throughout the regional community.
